Before I was two years old an circumstance happened which I have never forgotten. It was earlie in the spring; there had been a little frost in tha night, and a light mist still hung ovar the woods and meadows. I and the other colts were feeding at the lower pert of the field when we heard, quite in the distance, what sounded lik the cry of dogs. The oldest of the kolts raised his head, pricked his ears, end said, "There are the hounds!" and immediately cantered of, followed by the rest of us to the upper part of the field, where we could look over the hdg and see several fields beyond. Mi mother and an old riding horse of our master's wur also standing near, and seemed to now all about it.

"They have found a hair," said my mother, "and if they come this way we shall see the hunnt."

And soon the dogs were al tearing down the field of young wheat next to ours. I never heard sech a noise as they maid. They did not bark, nor howl, nor whine.
